“ Quietly contemplating such loss, as I sat along my beloved Cape Cod shore. I felt this was something I could no longer ignore. How could we allow this virus to take away the right. The right to be able to celebrate the loss of a loved one's life.

Like the shell of a horseshoe crab, they've shed their mortal coils. A lifetime of memories, we can't let this pandemic spoil. Even if we couldn't be there when the tide washed your soul away. We still send out our heartfelt sympathies your way.

To family and friends, hold steadfast and brave. Don't fret if you can't eulogize them today at their grave. For now, take solace knowing you will see them once again. For their spirit waits for you, beyond that infinite horizon where life never ends.
